THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECHES AT THE CONTINENTAL. - After the procession had passed the hotel, Mr. Johnson continued on the balcony for some time, until at last cries for a speech were too constant and too general to be resisted. Mr. Johnson consented to address the erowd, and when quiet was restored, he said:—
Fellow-citizens:—My visit to Philadelphia
on the present occasion was not for the purpose of making a speech, but I was on my way, in company with distinguished gentlemen, to the great city of the West-Chicago-to participate in laying the chief corner-stone of a monument to be erected to a distinguished statesman. Being here to day, I must be permitted to tender to the crtizens of Philadelphia my heartfelt and my sincere thanks for this demonstration—for this manifestation of their respect, given under peculiar circumstances, for one who has toiled throughout his life for the people. (Cheers.) This spontaneous coming forth of the independent freemen of Philadelphia to-day inspires me with renewed confidence and with a renewed determination to pursue my course in discharging the duties devolving upon me, and in administration to pursue my course in discharging the duties devolving upon me, and in administration to pursue my course in discharging the duties devolving upon me, and in administration. ministering the Government in such a way as I believe will best promote the great interests of the nation. (Cheers.)

We have just passed through a flerce and bloody conflict. We clamored and struggled for peace. The war is now over; peace has been made. I trust in God that war will not return again. (Cheers.) I trust in God that the day is far distant when one portion of the Union shall be arrayed in battle against the other. (Cheers.) I trust in God that the day is far distant when man will be set against man, and when a brother's hand will be lifted against his fellow, and I trest the day is far distant when this land will be drenched with the blood of our own people. (Cheers.) The baleful planet war has been chased away, and the star of peace has taken its place (cheers), and under its influence I trust the country will again return to all the avocations of peace, and that prosperity, harmony, and reconciliation will bless the land, and that we will stand together as one people with one Union. (Cheers.)

So far as referring to the past in regard to our political affairs, I told you I did not intend to make a speech. My public actions, my messages, are before the country, and it is for the people to judge. Believing that the policy that has been pursued is the policy to best promote the interests of the whole country, and so believing God being my helper, there I intend to stand and that, through the help of God, this Union shall be restored. (Cheers.) Then let us stand together; let us approach a common platform; let us forget that we have been divided; let us forget that we are required to obey the behest of party; but let us stand together for the country. (Cheers.) Let the country be saved, and then "party" may sink into insignificance. (Cheers.)
If we are to have a "party." let it be based apon the great principles of the Constitution. (Cheers.) Yes, the Constitution of my country is the strongest league that can be formed; and when you talk about Leagues-(laughter and applause)—when you talk about Leagues, tell me who it is that has entered into a covenant and formed a League to subvert the Constitution of the Union! He who has done that has entered into a covenant against his country, and his country should look to it! Let every man belong to the great League of the country, with the Constitution as his guide. I want no better League than that formed by Washington. (Cheers.) It was good enough for the patriots of the past; it is now good enough for you and me. (Cheers.) Now, as a band of brothers loving our country, and de-termining to support the Constitution, let stand together around the common altar of our country, and swear that all shall perish, all shall fall into the dust, but the Constitution and the Union of these States shall be preserved. (Cheers.) From my first advent into public life, it has been my constant habit in all doubtful questions to rely upon the integrity and intelligence of the great mass of the people. (Cheers.) There I stand to-day, by the Constitution of the country and by the country itself. These are in the hands of the people, and there I shall leave them, satisfied that you will at the proper time restore your country to its former condition of unity and power, and that it will stand redeemed and regenerated. (Cheers.)

As I entered your city to-day I saw upon a mechanical establishment of one of your citizens, "Welcome, the President!" (Cheers.) I knew it was the emanation of the laboring man (cheers), and that he who pinced it there knew that it would be understood. My confidence has always been that the people would get right, as indicated here to-day. (Cheers.) You can make a class of men who call themselves "politicians," and you can bring them to terms with-out much effort on your part. But we have hear I a great deal about "emancipation." Who has totled more for that than I have? (Cheers.) Are you sure that there is not a portion of the people here who need emoncipation? Who is t in power holding the tyrant's rod over you You talk about putting them out of office, and a clamor is raised. They seek to perpetuate their power, and they say to the people who have fought the battles of the country while they re-mained at home, "We must not be turned out to let others in." (Cheers.) What has become of the good old doctrine of rotation in office? Is nobody entitled to the offices except those who have them? (Cheers and laughter.) Having power, they exercise it and laughter.) Having power, they exercise it as unrelentingly as tyrants; but I say to you come up to the work; go to the ballot-box, and the tyrant's rod can be bent and broken. (Cheers.) I repeat that the Government is in your hands. Let it be there, where I have always been willing to trust it. I did not intend to say what I have. I designed merely to tender you my thanks. There are other gentlemen here who will be obliged to say something, and I shall conclude by tendering to you my sincere and heartielt thanks for this manifestation of your regard and respect for one who has labored through a whole and-I may say-a some what eventful life to promote the interests of the great mass of the people. (Cheers.) Again I thank you, gentlemen, and in parting I leave the Government with you, where I know it will be safe. (Cheers.)

At the conclusion of the President's speech the entire party on the balcony retired to the hotel, although there were cries for Seward and others. The immense crowd gathered in front of the Continental slowly separated.

After the address, Mr. Johnson and suite were entertained by the committee at a splendid banquet. SERENADE LAST EVENING.

In the evening there was a repetition of the excitement and enthusiasm in front of the Continental Hotel. Before dark the street was filled, but at 8 o'clock the crowd was so dense as to impede the progress of the Chesnut street cars, and at times it was impossible to move through the throng. Cheer after cheer was given tor the President. About 8 o'clock Mr. John-son took a post at the head of the main stair-way of the hotel, and arrangements were made by which the people were enabled to pass in and pay their respects. As usual, this consisted of shaking the hand, and thousands took advan-tage of the opportunity. Those who thus met the President were among the best of our cit-zens, and included merchants as well as mechanics. For over an hour a constant and steady stream of humanity passed up the stair-way, and the pressure was so great that it was with difficulty that a large force of police on duty could resirain the crowd and prevent the people from surrounding the President. were required to "move on" after the customary salutation. The reception was closed by the ap-tive Beneficial Association, each with a band of music, joined in the serenede. At this time the crowd was immense, filling Chesnut street from side to side, and from far above Ninth down to near Eighth. After severai airs by the band the President appeared on pearance of the serenading parties in Front of the kotel. The Keystone Club, the National Juneson Union Club, and the Tailors' Protec-the balcony, where he was received with the most enthusiastic cheering. Mr. A. B. Sloanaker introduced the President, and in doing so he said: Fellow-citizens, the President of the United States is very much fatigued by the journey and reception of to-day and evening, but he has come forward to show by his presence his respect for the people. I have the pleasure to introduce the President of the United States, Andrew Johnson. (Cheers.)

Mr. Johnson said:— Fellow-citizens of Philadelphia:—In presentone myself before you to-night, in obedience to your solicitations, it is not for the purpose of making an address, but simply to return my thanks for the manifestations of respect and regard on this occasion. I mean what i say, and, as I said to-day, under the peculiar circumstances, you are entitled to my most heartfelt thanks for this reception. I must leave to some other occasion to seek an opportunity of entering into a discussion of the questions that agthat concerns my political course, the history is well known to all of you, and I shall not attempt to review it now.

I am told, on this occasion, that there is an esociation here to-night who have come forward under the appellation of their own profession for the purpose of manifesting their regard I want you to understand that I do not leed indifferent to a thing of that kind, for in this Government of ours "it is worth that makes the man, the want of it the fellow;" and if there is an association here to-night, as I have been informed there is, that calls itself the Tailors' Protective Association, then to them I return my sincere thanks, with no feeble assurance of my kind regard for their profession. (Three cheers for Andrew Johnson, interminded with groans.) There is no position in life in which I could be placed that would lead me to forget my early history and my early profession; there is none that could make me forget the past as far as the profession is concerned. We should remember, when we refer to the mechanical interests of the country in connection with the agricultural, that they consutute the basis on which this Government rests; and when we refer to the profession that you represent here tonight, in common with your fellow-citizens, let me say that our great Father in Heaven, the Lord of the world, was a tailor by trade. (Laughter and applause.) And when you reter to bistorical account of this thing, you find that my remarks are literally true.

The President then retired. The crowd still remained, calling for Seward, Farragut, and Grant. General Grant came forward and bowed his acknowledgments, and then immediately retired. Farragut tollowed and, in a tew words expressed his regret that he was not a speech maker. Mr. Seward did not respond. The crowd remained until near midnight. About 11 o'clock the Young Mennerchor Singing Society, together with delegates from other German societies, appeared, and taking positions in the half in the second story, gave a number of choruses in splendid style.

ACCIDENTS .- The Coroner held an inquest yesterday on the body of John Becker, nine years old, who was run over by a coal train on the Reading Railroad at Frankford road. The child died at the Episcopal Hospital, where the inquest was held. The evidence showed that he was picking up coal on the railroad track. Charles Wagner, three years old, was run over by a passenger car yesterday at Ridge avenue and Francis street, and had one of his feet badly crushed.

James C. Berner, forty-one years old, fell off a scaffold at the Navy Yard yesterday, and broke one of his legs. He was taken to the

THE ATOMIZER.

Dr. VON MOSCHZISKER asserts with the utmost confidence that his sysem of treating LUNG, THROAT, CHEST Diseases CATARRH, AS: HMA and all maladies of the digestive organs, by the use of the A10Mizer, is the only reliable one. Since the introduction of this system cases have been brought to his effice. No 1631 WALLUT Street in which every other possible means two been intiflessly employed, but readily yielded a his treatment. The A10Mizer is an A17ARATUS constructed on scientific principles, which, by a mechanical arrangement, either by atmospheric pressure or sicaim, converts any medicine into a fine cPRAY, and readily conveys it hato the BRONCHIAL TUBES of LUNGS, with the RESPIRATORY CURRENT. The medicines submitted to the action of this APPARATUS lose nothing of their the AICAL VALUE, as in other preparations, but are received into the RESPIRATORY CREANS in their full MEDICINAL STRENGTH.
